

Section 1.4 High School Students Currently Enrolled in the District

Approximately one percent of all students enrolled in City College are concurrent high school students. This section describes a previous year cohort (fall 2001) of concurrently enrolled high school students in terms of their term retention (Table 10) and fall-to-spring persistence (Table 11). In addition, the extent to which these students return as regular admits during fall 2002 is examined (see Table 12).

As can be seen in Table 10, 83% of the concurrently enrolled high school students from the district feeders completed the fall 2001 term. Since there were only two currently enrolled students from the non-district feeders, their retention and persistence are not discussed here. In terms of fall-to-spring persistence, the data in Table 11 showed persistence rates of 38% for concurrently enrolled high school students from district feeders. Finally, 30% of the district feeder students who were concurrently enrolled high school students in fall 2001 returned in fall 2002 as a regular college admit.
